Director’s Corner

Sometimes I think that the library is the best-kept secret on campus! Did you know that you have access to over 11,000 full-text journals from any computer on campus? (and access to the majority of them from off-campus, using passwords provided upon request for current faculty staff and students) If you would like to find out what journal titles we get in a specific subject area do the following:

1. Go to our library website: www.nyackcollege.edu/library
2. Click on “Electronic Resources”
3. Click on “Titles of Full-Text Electronic Journals”

You can search either by specific title or by subject area. If you search by subject, you will be able to get a list of full-text journals available related to the specific subject, and it will provide the name of the database(s) that the full-text is available in. Happy Searching!

MAGAZINE REVIEW

The Week was chosen Best New Magazine of the Year by at least two different sources a few years ago. Its editors sift through dozens of US and foreign newspapers and magazines to find the most pertinent and fascinating news on a variety of subjects. The articles are concise, and The Week itself is only about 40 pages long, so one can generally read ones favorite parts in about an hour. Bailey Library has a copy in the leisure reading racks. I personally subscribe to it, and reading it is one of my favorite things.

BOOK REVIEW

We just recently acquired a new reference book, VideoHound’s Golden Movie Retriever, that will make your hunt for interesting movies much more fruitful. Not only are the reviews short, punchy, and pleasantly opinionated, but the guide also has a LARGE section at the back that lets you see all the movies an actor has starred in, a director has directed, etc. There is also a subject guide, so you can look up movies dealing with everything from “eats” to “mermaids” to “skydiving.” Oh, by the way, its call number is Ref. 791.4375 V66.
